Peculiarities of Mechanism of Death of Cultured Embryonic Neurons in Collagen-Containing Matrix. Cultures of primary neuronal cells in collagen-containing matrixes possess higher sensibility to hypoxia than neuron cultures in culture medium. Death of neuron cells is accompanied by morphological changes in the cell bodies which differ in various matrices. In this work, the morphologic and ultrastructural features of death of cortical neurons cultured in collagen-containing matrixes are analyzed. Changes in the structure of the nuclear chromatin and the appearance of nucleoli were the most characteristic changes observed. When the death process reached its complete phase, the cell bodies became defenestrated and extruded parts of the cell bodies were formed. Extruded parts of the cell body contained phagocytosed myelin, L-carnitine-imprinted mitochondria and nuclei of neighbouring cells. Phagocytosis was observed only in the late phase of neuron death.The system in which a light emitting diode (LED) using compound semiconductor is used is applied to a lighting device and the like. Among LED light sources, a light emitting diode made of nitride semiconductor has the highest light efficiency and an optical output of a device has been increased from several hundred milliwatts to several watts. A blue light emitting diode using the nitride semiconductor has been widely used in a light source for lighting in an automobile and a light emitting diode using the nitride semiconductor has been widely used in a display device. A field emission display device (hereinafter, abbreviated as FED) as one of the display devices is a device in which electrons are emitted to a light emitting layer by applying a high electric field to emit light. The FED is a display device with a curved fluorescent display tube wherein light is uniformly emitted in a wider area than the display area and a very small display area. The FED is widely used in the fields of a head-up display, a portable display such as a cellular phone and a television. The FED is characterized by higher brightness, higher emission efficiency and lower power consumption than the display device using the liquid crystal. In recent years, a light emitting diode is used as a light source of the FED. The display device using the FED is characterized in that light sources are arranged in an area wider than a display area and a very small display area, and the

--- abstract: | Let K be a number field of degree d, let R be a Dedekind ring, and let Λ be an R-algebra. We prove a natural comparison theorem between the category of K-linear representations of the absolute Galois group of K on Λ-modules and the category of continuous representations of the absolute Galois group of K on pro-algebraic groups over a profinite ring. As a corollary we obtain the following result, first proved by a previous author: for any local noetherian ring R and any smooth algebraic group G over R, the completion $\widehat{G}$ of G at any closed point of G is a quotient of a certain pro-algebraic group G_K. On the other hand, we show that the natural homomorphism $G_K\to\widehat{G}$ (which is the identity over the maximal ideal of R) is in general neither injective nor surjective. address: - | Department of Mathematics\ University of Michigan\ Ann Arbor, MI 48109 - | Instituto de Matemática, Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro\ C.
